Planning processes and development processes are affecting and sometimes upsetting to different parties involved. When interests collide or oppose each other, friction and sometimes conflict can arise. Whether the conflict is based on pure issues or personal contradictions, we may all need tips and advice on how we can work to emerge from a conflict.

Agneta Setterwall is an experienced facilitator in the areas of Conflict Management, Environmental Communication and Democratic Processes. She will lead this workshop where she will give us some theory of conflict and tools to work in situations of conflict.

Do you have any questions? Can we help you in any way?
